

News December 16, 2016

Juilliard School appoints Carol Rodland to its viola faculty

Most Shared

Most Popular

Currently professor of viola at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, Rodland takes up her Juilliard post in autumn 2017

1 6 tips for teaching young violinists by Suzuki instructor Teri Einfeldt

Sign up for our Newsletter

The Juilliard School has appointed violist and padagogue Carol Rodland to its viola faculty from autumn 2017.

Currently professor of viola at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, the Juilliard alumna is also an artist-faculty member at the Perlman Music Program, the Bowdoin International Music Festival, and the Karen Tuttle Coordination Workshop. She has previously taught at the Eastman School of Music, New England Conservatory, Berlin's Hanns Eisler Hochschule, and at Arizona State University.

A former prize winner at the Washington International Competition, the Artists International Auditions, and the Lionel Tertis International Viola Competition, Rodland is an active soloist and chamber musician, performing with the Rodland Duo, as well as with pianists Marcantonio Barone and Tatevik Mokatsian, and cellist Scott Kluksdahl.

Read: 11 views on teaching by Juilliard School violin professor Dorothy DeLay

Photo: J. Adam Fenster